SMITH REUNION

The annual reunion of the Smith family occurred at the Howard farm at Northwest Bethel. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Asa Howard, Fred Howard Charles Day, Mrs. Edna Smith, Josephine Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Davis, Virginia, Stanley and Jerrold Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert R. Rowe, Margery Rowe, all of Bethel; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kilgore, North Newry; Miss Eva Lowell, Joseph Perry, South Portland; Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Chapman, Hanover.

GARDEN CLUB

The September meeting of the Garden Club of Bethel will be held September 8th at the 2:30 p. m., at the home of the president, Mrs. W. R. Chapman. Mrs. Laurence Lord as chairman of the program committee will have something of interest to all.

STATE POTATO TRADE MARK RULES TO BE ENFORCED

Strict regulations for the manufacture and use of containers bearing Maine's red, white, and blue trademark will be enforced by the Department of Agriculture, Commissioner Frank P. Washburn warns. A set of rules made public by the Commissioner provide that manufacturers and users of the containers must be licensed and comply with the various features of the plan.

"We have an important advertising and merchandising campaign underway," he said, "and cannot afford to leave the way open for any unscrupulous tactics." The Maine Development Commission will supervise the campaign, and officials believe that "their most important job is to win and to hold the confidence of the consumers."

Under a state law the trademark now has an official standing and an application for its registration is pending in the U. S. Patent Office. It is officially described as "three parallel stripes, consisting of blue at the top, white in the center and red at the bottom, the stripes to be of appropriate length or width for the tag, bag, package, or container used." The blue and red stripes must be of equal width. The brand or trademark of the producer or shipper may be printed on the white stripe.

The words "State of Maine" must appear in the blue stripe and the name of the product in the red. Franklin Gothic type letters will be used.

The use of the trademark is permissible for all residents of Maine who are granted a license and abide by the regulations. Complete lists of the sale of all containers must be reported to the Department of Agriculture "which will insure the distribution of such containers only to those who are putting up the proper quality under the distinctive label."

It was stated that many manufacturers of containers have applied for permission to use the trademark on their products and that thousands have been ordered by shippers with their own brands or trademarks incorporated.

This fall Maine products will reach the markets under this plan. Potatoes will be featured as the result of a cent a barrel tax imposed by the last Legislature for this activity. Plans to do similar work on other products are underway this being made possible through the general appropriation for products advertising given the Development Commission. A campaign on lobsters has been decided upon and others for apples, canned goods, dairy products, etc., are in the making.

"Our various industries will now be able to inform the distributors and consumers of our fine products, maintain an established quality and eliminate the practice of using the good reputation of Maine products in marketing inferior grades," said Commissioner Washburn.

GRANGE FIELD DAY HAS GOOD PROGRAM

Oxford Pomona Field Day was held at Bryant Pond, Saturday, August 28. There was not a very large attendance. In the forenoon games were played and all sorts of stunts were enjoyed on the V. I. S. Field. A picnic dinner was held in Miss Georgia Crockett's Grove and the afternoon meeting was held in the Grove with the following program in charge of Ellis Davis Grange Deputy.

Address of Welcome, Pomona Master, E. E. Bennett Music by Grange Quartette, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Q. Perham Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davis Music by Rhythm Band, Little Tots of Juvenile Grange Lettie Day in charge "Captain Kid, That's Me," (in costume) Burton Perham Tap Dance, Joyce Cole Richard Felt, harmonica acc.

Song, Juvenile Grange Music, Mrs. Gilbert Woodsum and two sons of Saugus, Mass.

Address, F. Ardine Richardson Master of State Grange Address, Andrew L. Felker N. H. Com. of Agriculture

Rev. James MacKillop had charge of the sports in the forenoon. Miss Hazel Cole and Mrs. Verna Swan, matron and assistant matron and members of the Juvenile Grange sold ice cream, candy and soft drinks. Arthur Newell, Jr., helped all day and evening.

In the evening pictures were shown but the film of scenes and people around here did not come back in time but will be shown free to those holding tickets next Saturday night after the regular Grange meeting. All wishing to see the picture come to the Grange Hall.

RING REUNION

The descendants of John Ring held their annual reunion Sunday in the vestry of the Hunt's Corner Church with Wesley Ring as host. Several attended the church services in the morning, after which lunch was served in the vestry. The business meeting was opened by Arthur Packard. Officers were in the afternoon with prayer led by elected as follows:

OXFORD COUNTY FARM BUREAU LEADERS MEET

"The Executive Committee of the Oxford County Farm Bureau met at the South Paris Grange Hall last week with eleven members present. The most important matters of business discussed were plans for the coming membership campaign and the annual meeting. Other matters of business included a report of 4-H club accomplishments by Paul Wadsworth, county club project leader; a report of the Recreation Institute held last June by Miss Callaghan, home demonstration agent; and presentation of the financial budget and tentative program of projects for the county in 1938 to be recommended for adoption at the annual meeting.

Miss Callaghan, who has been attending summer school at Cornell, and Miss Rosen, county club agent, who spent two months with parents and two sisters in Sweden and European countries gave very interesting reports.

Dinner was served at noon by the South Paris Farm Bureau.

The Farm Bureau membership campaign will start September 27 and close on annual meeting day, which is Friday, November 5. The committee in charge of arrangements for annual meeting consists of Shirley Bonson and Mrs. Edith Stanley of Fryeburg, and Mrs. Ida Sturtevant of South Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Morey and daughters, Helen and Billy, of Syracuse, N. Y., spent the week end at the home of Mrs. Fannie Carter.

PETROLEUM COMMITTEE TO INSIST GAS TAX FOR ROADS

The Maine Petroleum Industries Committee met at the Lafayette Hotel, Portland, Tuesday, principally for the purpose of adopting a program of objectives for the ensuing year. Realizing that excessive taxation, burdensome restrictions, and improper or unwise use of motor vehicle tax revenues delay the full and speedy development of highway transportation, deny the benefits of automobile ownership and use to many residents of this state, and unfairly shift the tax burden on those less able to pay, the committee adopted the following program:

1. To insist that all gasoline and motor vehicle tax revenues be used for highway purposes only.
2. To advocate only fair and reasonable taxation of gasoline.
3. To render assistance to state and federal authorities in detection and elimination of gasoline tax evasion.
4. To urge the repeal of the unfair and unjust federal gasoline and lubricating oil taxes.
5. To oppose all tax and other proposals inimical to the petroleum industry and its motorist customers.

W. H. Schofield of the Tide Water Associated Oil Company, chairman of the group, discussed plans and preparations for the coming special legislative session seeking to prevent the imposition of further tax burdens upon the highway users of this state.

SAFETY EDUCATION URGED

With schools re-opening soon, parents should be prepared to give every consideration to the safety of their children, according to a statement issued recently by the Safety Educational Department of The Aetna Casualty and Surety Company.

After a summer of play and recreation, children in their formative years are apt to grow careless of the safety lessons learned from the previous school term, and each parent should do his part toward refreshing their minds and impressing them with the proper safety measures to be employed in crossing streets, using playground equipment, playing strenuous school games and other activities in which injuries or accidents are likely to occur.

It is pointed out by Aetna's Safety Educational Department that while most schools now have organized instruction for children, it is only through the proper cooperation of parents that such instruction can achieve its fullest benefit. "Safety lessons well learned during school years will not only help children to look out for themselves while attending school, but will also help them to safeguard against accidental injury in later life", this Department advises.

The imperative need for adequate safety instruction among school children is stressed by the following figures: Approximately 8500 school children between the ages of five and fourteen lost their lives through accidents during the past year. Of this total, 18% of the accidents occurred within school buildings, 17% on school grounds, 7% on the way to or from school, and the remaining 58% elsewhere. Figures indicate that the most dangerous places within school buildings are vocational shops, stairways and corridors.

"Dependable Dan," the athletic coaches and his schoolmates called him. And not only could they always depend on his promptness, his cheerfulness and his reliability, but they depended on his skill as a large factor in many a hard-won battle. For practice and games Danny was always there. A slight lameness from childhood gave him a handicap that he valiantly ignored and surmounted.

The fact that he was not quite as strong as his team-mates seemed to give him even a stouter heart. And after all 'tis the will-power and courage that count. When, during hard games between well-matched basket-ball teams, Danny's skill or adroitness would turn the tide for the home team, and the gymnasium would rock with applause, his shy smile and modest manner endeared him to the townsfolk, his schoolmates and his opponents.

He was a dutiful and loving son, interested in the farm work of his father and ever considerate of his mother.

He was such a happy laddie Always helping here on Earth. Now his brother and his parents Mourn his wonderful rebirth In a land that needs his worth.

Mrs. Herbert Morton entertained the Farm Bureau, Tuesday.

Mrs. Leona Ferren and daughter Earlene went to Andover, Wednesday to spend a week before returning to her home in Worcester, Mass.

Those from here who attended the Union Church Services at Upton, Sunday, were Ida Wight, Miss Carrie Wight, Mrs. Sarah Wight, Mrs. Amy Bennett, Mrs. Hartley
Hanscom and family, Mr. and Mrs.
L. E. Wight and Elizabeth.

Mr. and Mrs. William Walker have both been quite ill with the grippe.

L. E. Wight is cleaning and whitening walls and ceilings of the school houses.

Junior Vail went to Rumford last week for an operation for removal of his tonsils.

The State is tarring roads in this section at present.

F. W. Wight is laying a new water pipe.

Poplar Tavern and Wight's Brook Camps are having a good run this season.

Leater Lane has exchanged his Essex for a 1935 Ford. Roy Bennett has also bought a 1935 Ford sedan.

Richard Bennett, Miss Amy Bennett and Miss Leona Tripp will enter Gould Academy this fall.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Wight, Miss Carrie Wight and Elizabeth Wight attended the recital given by the pupils of Anton Eugene Mainente at Birch Villa Inn, Bryant Pond, Monday night.

THE LOW DOWN
from
HICKORY GROVE

When I go squintin' around in the paper, I always seem to run across something or other that is hush, comical and the latest. It is where they are fixin' to have a convention of the cosmetologists.

A cosmetologist is something that maybe every body don't know all about. And I looked her up and it is a person who tells you why it is that you look so funny, and what you should do about it.

And they are like fishermen, and any person who believe a fish story.
It would be safer to look him up.
And a person who imagines that a touch of purple paint at 2 dollars per touch, is gonna do anything except make you look like a sick Sioux they might also be watched.

But these artists of the cosmetics maybe they do some good, 'cause I see where the government says that we should put money in circulation And instead of saving or payin' our bills, we should spend more.

And for fish stories, it is a tight race between the cosmetologists and Uncle Sambo.

Yours, with the low down,
JO SERRA

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner
Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual, National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare

Prices continue to rise. During the first half of this year, according to a Business Week survey, wholesale prices were 9 per cent higher than in 1936. Raw materials were up 14 per cent. Farm products cost 18 per cent more. Food increased 6 per cent. The general cost of living was 5 per cent great-

One of the few manufactured articles whose price had not generally advanced, was the automobile. Car makers always dread a price increase—because they think it will result in a large number of motorists driving their old cars a few months longer, and so reduce sales. And the business is so highly competitive today, especially in the $600-$1000 price field, that every maker is loath to take the step and charge more for his cars.

A short time ago, however, definite signs appeared that the motor industry is at last falling in line with the general upward price trend. Ford announced price increases of from $15 to $35 on his line of cars. General Motors followed suit almost immediately, with increase starting at $35 in the low-priced Chevrolet, and ranging to $100 on the relatively high priced Cadillac. A number of Chrysler cars likewise were given higher price tags. It is believed that the entire industry will soon fall in line, from necessity, with this policy, though some makers may defer price boosts until the 1938 model comes out this fall. Even so, it is doubtful if the entire additional expense in manufacturing operations experienced by motor makers this year—caused by higher material and labor prices—will be passed on to the public. Chances are that around half of the increase will be added to the selling price of the cars and the rest absorbed by the companies which will then show a smaller profit per unit and will depend on greater sales.

Higher car prices are of importance as a sign of the times—in the last two years, there have been steadily, continuous increases in the cost of practically everything, with the exception of the rates of certain service industries. Big worry to businessmen is whether the public will accept higher prices with equanimity—in a few lines, such as meats, higher prices have resulted in decreased sales. However, most businessmen have no choice in the matter—operating expenses have risen so materially that it is necessary to constantly raise prices to avoid losses.

Other business news of interest: CONSTRUCTION: The long anticipated "boom" in home building seems to be underway. Residential construction during the first half of the year was 42 per cent ahead of the same period last year. The steady upsurge in rentals, plus a deficiency of houses for rent in many cities, is an important factor.

RAILROADS: Will probably begin buying new equipment on a big scale soon. Traffic has increased so rapidly that a number of lines fear that their facilities will be inadequate for fall and winter freight.

RETAILING: A big fall season is anticipated, perhaps the best since 1930. Department stores in most sections are stocking heavily.

POWER AND LIGHT: Electric output recently hit an all-time high peak. Result is that major public service companies are steadily increasing generating capacity, in line with their policy of always being ahead of demand. Fall and Winter power use will undoubtedly set new records.

WAGES: Continues to rise slowly. Employment during the summer when seasonal adjustment is made was at a good level. There have been fewer labor troubles lately, and it would seem that the unions are slowing down on direct action tactics, in order not to alienate public sympathy. In spite of the progress of reemployment, government relief rolls are still almost as big as ever.

The way the international wind blows is indicated by the proposal that the President be authorized to lend a number of decommissioned World War destroyers to South American countries. These destroyers would be kept in good operating condition, could be immediately recalled by the United States if needed by us.

It is unthinkable that the U. S. plans a war of aggression. No country deserves peace more. But, at the same time, the outlook in world affairs is so grave that we are expanding our military resources on an unprecedented peacetime scale.

The old naval treaty between England-Japan-U. S., is to all interests and purposes, dead. Japan and England are building ships on a vast scale, and the U. S. has announced that she will mount 16-inch guns, banned by the treaty, on the two super men-of-war now in process of construction.

It is forecast that the Navy Department will request a still bigger appropriation from the next Congress.

will be his last Sunday among us.

CALLED LEATHERNECKS
BECAUSE OF NECKWEAR

It is a popular belief that the U. S. Marines are called Leather-necks because of their exposure to the heat of the tropics and the suntanning effects of the rays of Old Sol. But the sea soldiers were given their sobriquet for an entirely different reason.

Stiff leather stocks once made them hold their heads erect in the approved military manner and prevented powdered queues from brushing the backs of their uniforms, although the leather stocks remained until long after the sea soldiers had shorn their locks and abandoned other customs which were in vogue a century ago.

For nearly a hundred years leather stocks were issued to the marines as part of their uniforms, even though there was no more need to tell members of the Corps to "keep their chins up" in those days than it would be necessary today. As a matter of fact, they could not keep them down.

There is no evidence to prove that the sea soldiers wore leather stocks during the Revolution, but it is positively known that they were a part of the uniform early in 1798. After that time they are mentioned in Marine Corps orders from time to time until about 1880, when they were abandoned. If the reports of its wearers are any criterion, the marines were not sorry to see them disappear.

The late Major General George F. Elliott, former commandant of the Marine Corps, wore a leather stock when he was a young lieutenant in 1874, and later described it as follows: "It was made of very heavy leather about three inches in height, and it went around the neck to be fastened by a strap at the back. A man so arrayed could see only the moon or the sun."

From these stocks the marines have inherited the descriptive term of which they are rather proud, even though it refers to the neckwear of their forebears of an earlier day. The name has proven durable and the sea soldiers call their magazine, "The Leatherneck."

Evidently the stocks themselves had long wearing qualities, for Major Daniel Carmick, a marine hero of the War of 1812, wrote of them: "I wore one myself for nine years and then only laid it aside because it was out of fashion, not that it was any worse for wear."

ADVENTURE IS COMING IN THE AMERICAN BOY

Readers who like adventure and the lure of far places will find plenty to please them in coming issues of THE AMERICAN BOY Magazine.
They'll read, for instance, of seamen and sabotage and San Francisco water-front trouble; of daring adventure in the world of pseudo-science, and of a feud aboard a plunging, rolling battleship.

They'll read, too, of excitement aboard a transport plane blaring over jungled Mexican mountains, and of stranger planes that are not bound to earth but swing through noiselessness of space. Readers can follow a young ex-mountie as he searches for clues in the wild northlands, and Tierney, the pie-eating detective, on the trail of city criminals.

A new feature in THE AMERI-CAN BOY is picture pages that tell stories. Pictures, for instance, that vividly show a day in the life of a coast guardsman, and how an Eskimo husky sled dog does his work.
They transmit the thrill of battling a hundred pound, water-churning tarpon. Tips on how it's done are also given pictorially—ranging from how to run a broken field to how to be correct in a ballroom!

NOTE: Subscription prices of the AMERICAN BOY will be raised in the near future. Send your subscription order at once to take advantage of the bargain rates now in effect: one year at $1.00 or three years $2.00. Foreign subscriptions 50 cents a year extra. Send your name, address and remittance to
THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Bldg., Detroit, Mich. On newsstands the price is 15 cents a copy. adv

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

SELF-TIMERS

You can take a picture of the family picnic and be in it yourself by using a self timer.

THE question is often asked, "Is there any way that I can take a snapshot of my friends and include myself in the picture?"

There certainly is a way and a simple one. Use a self timer.

A self timer is a most fascinating little gadget and almost human in its operation. It is an inexpensive accessory that fits over the metal button, or plunger, at the end of the cable release, which you press to take a snapshot with a folding camera. It cannot, however, be used unless the camera is fitted with a cable release.

Here is how it works. First you locate your subject in the finder and at the same time plan the space you will occupy when you step into the picture.

Suppose you want to take a picture of a group on a picnic or at the beach. You will have to have the camera on a tripod, table or something solid. Locate the group in the finder—and be sure you can see the spot you will occupy or you may be among those missing when the prints are returned.

When the lens aperture is set at the proper opening with the correct shutter speed, the same as if you were going to snap the picture yourself, set the self timer for the length of time it would take you to get to your place in the group. Slip the self timer over the button at the end of the cable release and press the little release lever on the timer. It starts buzzing away, you rejoin the group and then—click—it has taken the picture and you're in it.

You can purchase a self timer attachment from almost any store that sells photographic supplies.
They are not expensive and last a lifetime.

Some cameras have self timer's incorporated in the shutter construction, so if you have this type of camera and have never used the self timer you have missed a lot of fun and picture taking opportunities.

NATIONAL AUTOMOBILE FATALITY CHART

Indicates DECREASES in Automobile fatalities Indicates INCREASES in Automobile fatalities Indicates NO CHANGE in Automobile fatalities Indicates lack of adequate data for comparison

The above chart shows the gain and losses by states in the nationwide campaign now being waged for highway safety. During the first six months of 1937 automobile fatalities increased 15% as compared with the same period of 1936, in the 29 states from which fatality reports were received.

Romans First to Offer Circus Entertainments

The name circus was first applied by the Romans to the circular inclosures wherein their games were performed. Later it came also to designate the performances given within them.

The Circus Maximus, as rebuilt by Trajan, was said to have been capable of holding an audience of 500,000. Eight large circuses were built by Roman emperors. All are now heaps of ruins, if not wholly obliterated, except that of Caracalla, outside the city near the Appian Way, which is in a fair state of preservation.

The Romans varied the monotonous spectacle of gladiatorial fights and hand-to-hand struggles between wild beasts and men, with mimic sea fights and baiting of crocodiles, in at least two of their circuses, which could be flooded with water. And in milder moods they had chariot-races and performing horses, wrestling matches, rope dances and other acrobatic acts.

But the circus in something like the form we know seems not to have existed until the Eighteenth century. The popular amusements of medieval times were processions, passion plays and annual fairs, these often being enlivened with side shows of monstrosities or a wild animal or two.

The first circus established on the modern plan was that of Philip Astley, at Lambeth, London, about 1770. An equestrian himself, he had engaged others and given shows. Then he built a rude stadium near Westminster bridge, and so popular did his circus become that he was able a few years later to build a handsome amphitheater which was opened in 1780. The place was burned three times, in 1794, 1803, and 1842, each time being immediately rebuilt.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Rodney Shaw, independent trader, arrived in Michilimackinac in 1816, determined to fight the monopoly established by the John Jacob Astor company in the Northwest territory. He is met by Conrad Tich, an elderly clerk, Ramsey Crooks, Astor's dominant figure, and Annette Leclerc, local beauty and inspiration to all the traders, especially to Burke Rickman, ruthless trader who is the instrument of destruction to traders refusing to amalgamate with the Astor company. Rousseau, the town bully, wearing the black feather symbol of invincibility, knocks down Shaw's head carman, Basile, and Shaw in return throws Rousseau into the water. Ramsey Crooks presents the symbolic black feather to Shaw. Later, at a conference, Shaw scorns Astor's proposal virtually to surrender his independence, announces his readiness to fight the amalgamation, and prepares to depart the following day.

CHAPTER II—At a ball that evening Shaw recognizes Burke Rickman as the Astor agent who had previously robbed him of his partner and his trade, and as a dangerous rival for Annette, with whom he is infatuated. There is an exchange of bitter words. Annette is chosen queen of the dance, and after flirting with both Rickman and Shaw, chooses Shaw as king for the following evening. Basile warns Shaw to hasten his departure and tells him an old man awaits him at his tent. Shaw finds Leslie, an old free-trader, who proposes that Shaw join him and go to the rich Pillager country, where Astor is planning to send Rickman. He shows him a map and an Indian ceremonial stone given him by Standing Cloud, Pillager chief. Shaw promises to give his answer the following evening. Shaw accepts Leslie's offer.

CHAPTER III—The spying Rickman finds Annette alone and artfully belittles Shaw, aggravating Annette into revealing his plans, until Rickman learns of the partnership and the departure for rich unclaimed ground. He follows Shaw to Leslie's camp and hides within earshot. Shaw finds Leslie very ill, attended by his clerk, Giles. With Giles as a witness, Leslie gives Shaw the map and the Indian stone. After Shaw departs, Leslie dies. Rickman ascertains the old man's death, and plunges a knife into his heart. Shaw, reaching his camp, finds soldiers with a warrant for his arrest on a charge of murdering Leslie. He sees Rickman in the crowd ready to take him to prison and realizes the foul trick. Annette finds the black feather near Shaw's camp, and keeps it. Basile reports to Shaw, in prison, that Rickman embarks the following day, and that Giles is intimidated from telling the truth. Shaw, impatient at the delay, orders Basile to hold all in readiness for the moment he can escape. The following morning, Basile reports that Rickman has departed, after Annette has made love to him.

CHAPTER IV—Under cover of a storm, Shaw escapes and joins his men. Their large canoe overtakes Rickman's brigade, passing the camp silently, before substituting two smaller craft for portage purposes on the nine-mile march to Knife portage three days in the lead of Rickman. As Shaw's party sleeps, a detachment of Rickman's men smash Shaw's canoe.

CHAPTER V

They did not sleep again. They prepared the goods for a move by land and when the first hint of daylight appeared took up the task.

Upstream and back into the forest, Rodney led them, establishing a camp in a place from which it could not be observed by travelers on the river. There, under heavy guard he would leave his goods while he made his way down to the canoe maker's and awaited the building of a new transport. When the camp was made he led two of his stalwarts under heavy burdens over the way he had come.

Near the end of the journey, which consumed the entire day at forced march, he heard the voices of men in the river far below the heights he traveled.

A canoe had just passed a shallow rapid, half light, and the boatmen had been removed. These goods were largely casks. The casks held alcohol, he knew, each five-gallon container potentially 20 of spirits, as liquor was diluted in the trade.

A wealth of property, there. Enough to ensnare a mighty band of hunters.

His heart went down, then; it fell lower than it had on his arrest; lower than the level it had reached when he watched Rickman put off from Michilimackinac.

At dusk he stalked into the canoe maker's camp and told briefly of his need.

The fabrication of one canoe had already been started but it was a small craft, a two-man canoe with less than half the capacity of the four-fathom canoes used by brigades in river travel. It, however, was the thing to which Rodney turned with shining eyes when his bargain for other work had been driven.

How long would its completion require? he asked.

The Indians chattered, argued, decried. . . . Three, yes; two, perhaps. . . . Rodney gave the man a cautious gill of spirits to bind the pact.

Cajoled, flattered by Rodney, the entire family worked, master craftsman about the canoe, children digging spruce roots, holding one end in their teeth, stretching the other to arm's length and splitting expertly with knives. The grandmother gathered pitch, the wife more cedar and birch bark.

The men had been sent back to Basile at dawn and, with the next descending sun, the old steersman would be there to listen to the audacious plan Rodney had hatched to meet the emergency confronting him.

But old Basile looked skeptically at the canoe when he arrived.

"So small?" he questioned. "For three men, at the most?"

"Yes, small, Basile!"—a hand on the Frenchman's shoulder, gripping and shaking. "Not for three, but two men. For Jacques and me, and a cask of small goods. Did you spy on them as they passed? Yes? Did you note the kegs? Did you guess what their contents might mean, should they be poured down hunters' gullets before I arrive to show the token to Standing Cloud? Attend, mon enfant! . . . and he slipped an arm across Basile's shoulder and drew him close and whispered excitedly in his ear.

Basile stiffened with amazement and incredulity.

"But, no! It's a fool's venture—nause!"

"Fool I am, then! It's the chance—the one chance. Basile! You will follow, with the goods, where the canoes are finished? We keep on; we still move as free men and fight as men who starve without freedom!"

And so, two dawn later, with Jacques before him, alcohol and weapons and presents and their blankets in the canoe, Rodney shoved off in the wake of Rickman's brigade while Basile remained behind to hasten, as best he could, the canoe maker at his tasks.

Burke Rickman was no empty oraggar; his reputation for competence was not without good foundation.

Convinced though he was that he had dealt Shaw a blow from which he never could recover in time to make his bid for the Pillager trade effective, he drove his men deeper into the forest on the next stage of the march.

But a light canoe makes twice the speed of a laden one. And two men work more adroitly and with less confusion than a score. So Rodney gained with each hour he and Jacques plied their paddles or grunted over portages.

When Rodney saw the brigade in the distance he went cautiously, hugging the inside of bends, scouting ahead by foot occasionally to determine that their progress was safe for still another hour from observant eyes. . . .

Night, and Rodney Shaw wriggling on his belly through long grasses to look across and down upon the camp of his adversary. Three nights Rodney crept up on Rickman's camp, but failed to find it possible to put his plan into execution.

But the fourth night he returned and roused Jacques and they packed their baggage and embarked, the canoe making no sound that was audible above the murmur of the current.

Rickman had made an exception ally hard day's march. Both guards dozed beside the fire.

Across the stream was a lush rice bed, and into this Rodney guided the canoe. At his whispered command Jacques ceased paddling. "Silently, now!" he whispered. "Your task is to remain silent. And to hold the canoe when I leave it. And to return the way we have come if I fail to return!"

The glow of the fire came abreast. One guard lay prone by the blaze; the other nodded on the opposite side.

"Now! . . . Hold the canoe so!" whispered Rodney, and laid his pad-die down while Jacques gathered rice blades in his hands for an arrow. Shaw, as silent as a shadow, lifted one foot overside and felt for bottom.

And then, from under his very nose as he awayed outward to stand erect, a duck lifted into the air, flapping and squawking! The sound in the stillness was, by contrast, tremendous. Another took wings to their right, and two more, and, in seconds, a dozen ducks were in alarmed flight, females squawking, drakes uttering their throaty notes of alarm. . . .

And the sleeping guard across there was sitting up. His companion was on his feet, rifle in hand.

"Sh!"—from Rodney. "Hold so. They cannot see!"

The two boatmen by the fire muttered and then one spoke more loudly.

"A mink, disturbing the fowl," he said. "Or a fox, slipping up for a bite. . . ." He stretched and yawned. "Sacred! But this driving gives weight to a man's lids!" he growled, and, putting his rifle down, began to pace slowly back and forth, rubbing sleep from his eyes.

Rodney softly took his place in the canoe. "Let go," he whispered glumly. "The chance has passed."

"Silently, Now," He Whispered.

And back in her house at Mackinac that night Annette's old aunt stormed and fumed while the girl sat staring absently before her, looking small and disconsolate.

"What is, is always worse!" the woman lamented. "First one is in a sweat at the way you risk your virtue with these stalwart young men. Then one is in a chill at the way you sit at home and will have none of them whatever, and grow thin and white. It is like a sickness! And for what?" she shrilled. "For yearning over a roving trader who stoops to murder that he may—"

"It was not murder!" the girl cut in, color staining her face. "The post surgeon says so! He was told of the condition of the body. And he says no knife could have entered the body while he lived and spilled so little blood or left such a wound as was left! It was a plot to thwart Rodney!"

The old woman grumbled and rummaged in the deep pockets of her great black skirt.

"Better for you had you wed this Rickman when he first came wooing. At least, he is respected and held law-abiding and competent by the powers that rule this place. A girl would be safe with him in years to come."

Two more days for Shaw of following closely and marking time and chafing. The river narrowed, became more tortuous in its curving. Then the northern sky clouded and rain began to fall in late afternoon.

The downpour became heavier, more insistent, and Rodney went ashore alone to observe Rickman's men making camp. He saw the goods piled on shore and covered; saw the canoes upturned and oilcloths stretched over them to shelter the men; saw Rickman's tent pitched and a fire started.

Rickman and Rich ate within the tent. The men bolted their food and slunk beneath the oilcloths. The two men on guard made efforts to keep the fire going. They were not successful and finally Shaw saw them draw blankets over their heads and sit together tight against one of the canoes.

Rodney crept closer to the encampment. A dark bulk rose above him, which was the first mound of packages, snug from the rain. Cautiously he drew out the underfolded edge of oilcloth and felt for the cold sides of the oaken casks. The first came out and he carried it quickly to the stream, rolling it in. The slight bump and splash were lost in larger noises. He carried another and surrendered it to the current and another and still another.

He warmed to the task. He jerked casks from the pile and let them roll down the slope. One and two and six and a dozen! . . . He searched frantically with his hands for more. That was all!

Then, chuckling a bit he slipped into the current after them and crossed to the other side and made his way downstream.

Jacques, curled like a wolf beneath the stretched cloth, awoke with an alarmed grunt at Shaw's touch.

"Come! We march!"

"Now? Tonight? In this storm?"

"Ay! Now. . . . And in safety! In this storm we pass the camp of the brigade without suspicion! . . ."

An hour later he was, indeed, above Rickman's uncomfortable, disastrous resting place. He was cold and drenched and weary. But he kept on until nearly dawn before landing for a snatch of sleep and a handful of food before he resumed his way.

On a green and azure and golden morning, Rodney Shaw emerged from the rice-choked stream which drained into the lake of the Pillagers.

To his right, which was the northern side of the lake, lay a clearing on a gentle slope and the stockade and buildings of a trading post gleamed against the background of forest, a blockhouse perched above the gaping gate.

"Nor'westers," he muttered. "Too elaborate an establishment for an independent. And it's Astor's, by forced purchase. We won't trespass, Jacques!"

A mile further on, tucked behind a sheltering point, he saw the second stockade and outlay of buildings and headed toward it.

The place was all—was more—than he could have hoped for. The stockade was of stout pickets ten feet tall, sharpened on the end. Within was a storehouse, trader's quarters with fireplace and wet-packed earthen floor, and a house for the men, all of logs. Once they had been washed with paint made of white clay and water, but the stuff was flaked and dropping, now.

Within an hour after he had landed, three canoes approached from as many directions. Hunters, these, come to appraise this new trader and to give Rodney his first sight of the Pillagers.

He made his visitors meager presents and explained that his canoes, laden with goods, were on the way. "But why does the trader take the small lot?" one asked. "A voice like a murmuring wind has come up the Mississippi. It has told us that the company from the island of the Great Turtle will trade in the fort. Is not the trader from the company?"

A little stab of apprehension ran through Rodney.

"That voice spoke what is true," he said. "The great company does come. It may be that its goods will arrive before mine arrive. But the great company is like a raven, waiting to pick the bones of hunters. I am not of it."

An old man grunted assent. "Voices have told here that the great company trading alone enslaves the hunters," he said.

"The voices spoke truth. I will give you tobacco."

He handed small amounts of twist to each. They smoked and talked further and at what he thought a proper time Rodney asked the location of Standing Cloud's camp.

"I bear for him a token of brotherhood," he said and was somewhat nettled that the grunts which followed the statement were not more enthusiastic. But they pointed out the way to the chief's lodge and soon Rodney was headed there.

A tall gaunt Indian, naked to the waist, legs encased in finely tanned buckskin, sat on a rush mat. The chief's face betrayed no emotion, neither animosity nor friendliness. Rodney came to a halt before him, his right hand upraised.

"Standing Cloud," he said, "I have come many leagues to have talk with you. I have come to trade with you and your people. But first I have come to bring you words of praise and friendship from my brother, Leslie."

The other grunted impassively, his eyes busy on Shaw's face.

"Leslie hungered to come," Rodney continued. "Leslie waited many days to come with me. But a great sickness of the breast was upon him. He is departed. They poured sand over him at the island of the Great Turtle."

Standing Cloud stirred slowly at that.

"Your words cast a cloud across the sun," he said. "Leslie was my friend. But for him sand would have been poured over Standing Cloud many moons ago at the prairie of dogs."

"It is so. Leslie spoke of this to me. But he could not come. So he sent me to bear you words of praise as a brother and to return this stone to you."

He reached into his pouch and extended the ornament. The man took it, eyed it, turned it over. He looked long at Shaw then and grunted.

"Let us smoke," he said briefly and Rodney drew a sigh of vast relief, knowing he had been accepted without further question.

He told, then, in detail, the story of events leading up to his arrival there.

"So the great company's goods will arrive before mine. Flaming Hair will appear burdened with presents while my hands are empty. But the Pillagers must know what evil comes to hunters when the great company alone is among them. Will my new brothers await the coming of my canoes?"

Standing Cloud pondered at length.

"My pathway is clear and bright," he said. "My eyes are not clouded. There is but one way for me to travel. That is to help my brother's brother. I go, now, to the lodge of Black Beaver. I will come to your place and talk in another sun."
